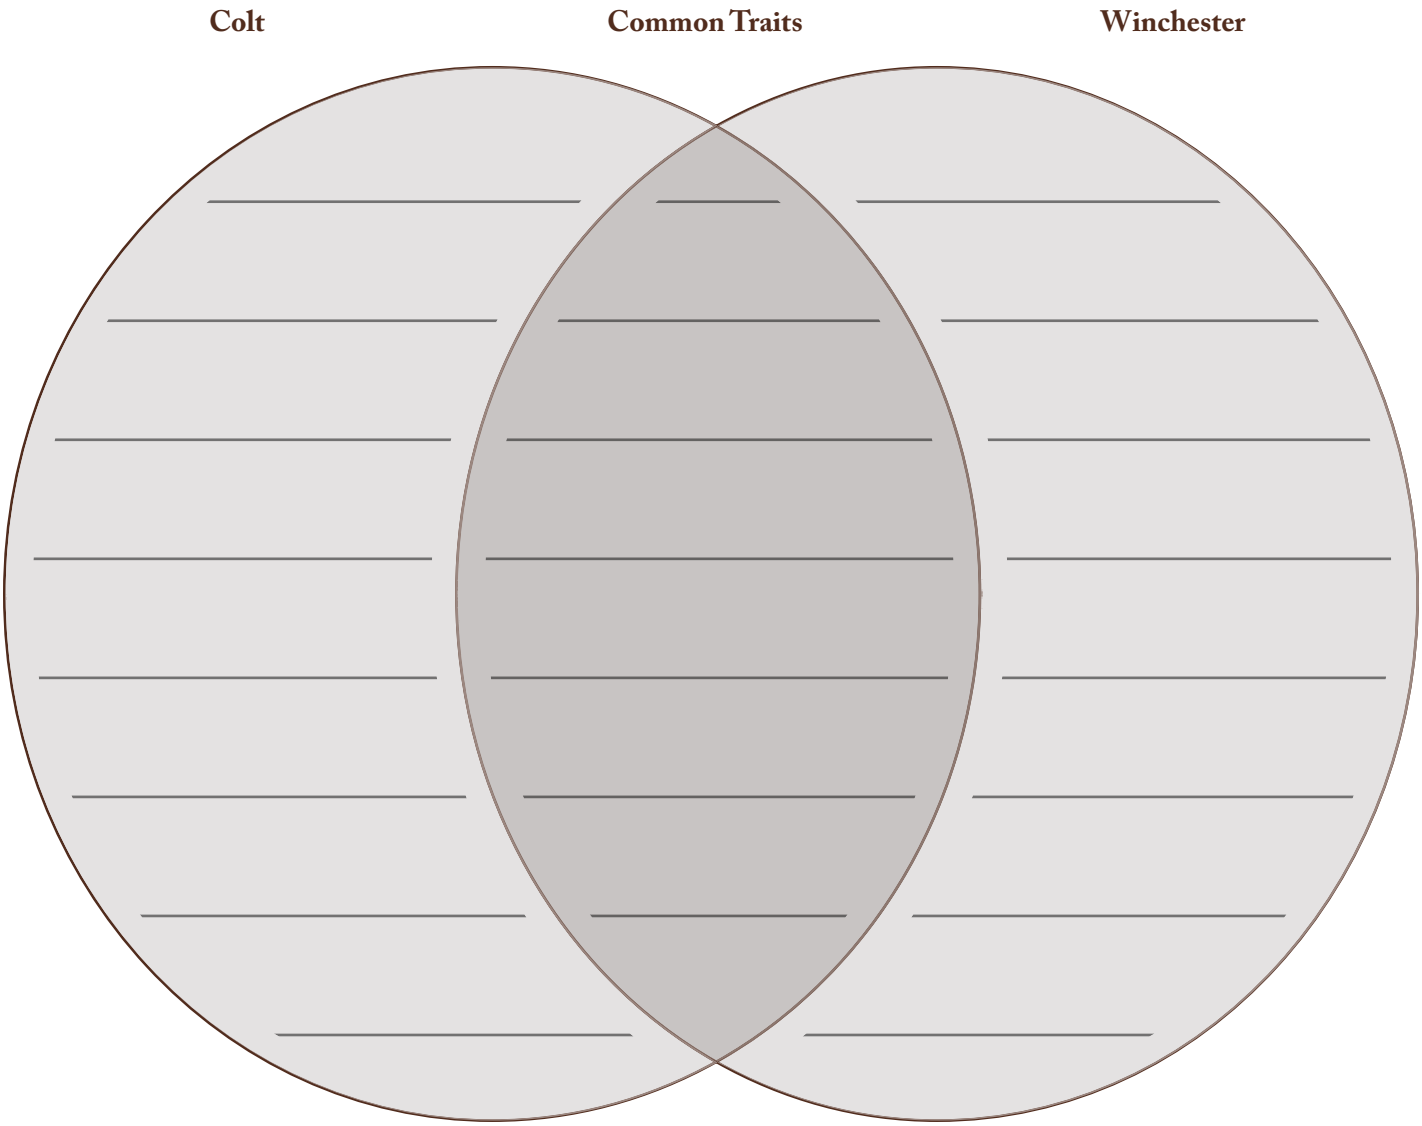
Comparing Historical Figures


Samuel Colt and Oliver Winchester were both similar and very different men in the early firearms industry. To gain a better picture of the kind of people they were, use the diagram below to compare and contrast these industrial giants. Write traits unique to one individual or the other in the separated space and common qualities in the overlapping area. To get started, consider the background, talents, marketing ability, and customer base of both mean and relationships they had with their employees. Try to think of other characteristics and include those as well.