

The Housewife

Generally rectangular in shape, of cloth or leather that could be folded and tied, the “housewife” contained needles, yarn, and a thimble for mending clothing.

Soldiers were often sent off to service by their mothers, sisters, or sweethearts equipped with such an item, as it was general practice for enlisted men to attend to their own uniforms.